| Course | Historic Udatsu T | own Aizome Indig | go Dyeing | | | | | | | |
| Experience Overview | Indigo cultivation became more popular in Yosninogawa than rice cultivation, and around the Edo period (1603-1867), the export of indigo dye dye from Tokushima to the rest of Japan flourished, enriching the lives of local residents around Yoshinogawa. The udatsu townscape was established as a castle town and eventually developed as a gathering place for indigo. Today, 85 traditional buildings from the mid-Edo period to the early Showa period, mainly dating from the Meiji period, stand in a row, preserving the landscape of modern and early modern times. One of the main features of this row of houses is that many of them have "udatsu" (plastered roofs with tile thatched roofs) at both ends, which is why they are commonly known as "udatsu rows. After strolling along the udatsu-lined streets, visit a jidaiya (a traditional Japanese confectionery) and a wagashi (Japanese sweets) factory. Visitors can | | | | | | | | | |

| Overview | Otani Pottery has a tradition of over 230 years in the town of Oma, Naruto. It developed due to the demand for huge indigo jars to hold the indigo solution used in indigo dyeing. Large pieces such as indigo jars are made using a unique technique called "neyorokuro," in which one person lies on the side and turns the potter's wheel with their feet while the other person molds the piece. Visitors will have the opportunity to try their hand at painting at one of the famous pottery studios, Mori Toki. At the Aizumicho History Museum Ai no Yakata, visitors can learn about the history of indigo, including the residence of the Okumura family, a large indigo merchant who has remained since the Edo period, traditional tools, and the process from cultivation to processing and indigo dyeing. | Overview | Saijo City is one of the few cities in the world where the distance from Mt. Ishizuchi (1,982m) to the sea is only about 30 km! The terrain directly below Saijo City is like a huge underground tank. The balance is maintained by the underground water from the shizuchi Mountains and the tidal pressure from the Seto Inland Sea. The ground is like floating on top of the water. Due to this special topography There are many springs called "uchinuki," where water gushes out simply by digging a hole in the ground. This cycling tour takes you from the mountains of Saijo City to the sea, where you can "touch and drink" the clean water of Saijo City. July Saturday and Sunday only, Experiencing tea leaves from harvesting to steaming July, Thursday and Friday only, tea leaf processing Late July to the end of August, sun-drying after fermentation | | | | | | | | |
| Selling Point | The process of growing Ishizuchi black tea t has been handed down from generation to generation at the foot of Mount Ishizuchisan. It is one of only four post-fermentation teas in Japan that are fermented by microorganisms, and is a two-step fermentation tea that undergoes aerobic fermentation by filamentous fungi and anaerobic fermentation by lactic acid bacteria. It has a refreshing taste when drunk warm, and a light and refreshing taste when drunk cold. Although it declined temporarily during the Showa period (1926-1989), local groups have taken over the production and continue to produce it, keeping this traditional drink alive. In this tour, you will experience the production of Ishizuchi black tea and enjoy tasting it to experience it yourself. | | | | | | | | |

| Course | Tosa Traditional Paper Making Tour | | | | | | | | |
| Overview | The experience includes: heguri of kozo (paper mulberry), beating kozo, papermaking (including mixing flowers), pressing, and drying. This is a full course that allows you to experience everything from the raw materials to the papermaking process. The finished product will be A4 and postcard size washi. The washi you make can be rolled up and used for lampshades and other purposes. Although much attention is paid to the "paper-making" part, the process of making paper requires a lot of time and effort, starting with work in the fields, and the charm of "washi-making connected to nature" is contained in this process. | | | | | | | | |
| Selling Point | There are many washi-making experiences throughout Japan, but at Shikashiki Paper Mills, guests can experience every step of the process, starting with heaping the bark of the paper mulberry tree, so that they can feel connected to nature and realize that washi is a sustainable craft. | | | | | | | | |
